Summary of reasons for decision:

The publication presents depictions of sexual activity between men and women. The scenarios, behaviour and treatment seems calculated to reinforce negative stereotypes of women, and to present them as inferior to men. It also presents Asian women as inferior. The women performers allow themselves to be treated in such a way and at times encourage the treatment. This is likely to have the effect of creating the impression that women enjoy being treated with contempt, hostility and aggression.

The publication also contains material that causes it to tend to promote and support the use of urine in association with sexual conduct. Although this material could be excised, the aggressive, highly degrading, dehumanising and demeaning elements are so extensive throughout the publication that excisions would be too extensive to be practicable in this instance.

The classification of objectionable interferes with adults' freedom of expression as set out in the New Zealand Bill of Rights Act 1990. However, this right needs to be balanced against the likely injury to the public good from making available a publication that represents women as inferior and that promotes attitudes towards women that most New Zealanders would find disturbing and unacceptable. The classification of objectionable reflects the concerns of New Zealand's democratic society, as set out by Parliament in the Films, Videos, and Publications Classification Act, that such publications should not be available. This is the minimum restriction that can be applied to prevent injury to the public good.
